MEANING

Vaginal discharge is referred as irritation or vaginal and vulva, redness, intense itching, odour, discharge of mucus and pain during intercourse.

CAUSES

A mucous discharge from the vagina is normal during the childbearing years, especially as path of the menstrual cycle. The discharge may be abnormal if it is excessive, yellow or green, odorous or offensive smell and causes irritation or itching.

The body to eliminate abnormal toxins uses abnormal discharge, but this discharge can become abnormal when there is a bad-eating habit because of the modern western diet; where discharge problems have been quite common.

The diet is loaded with fat, which stimulates fat cells throughout the body to produce oestrogen.

The lack of fibre diet, along with excess oestrogen encourages the growth of intestinal bacteria which converts bile acid into additional oestrogen like Hormones.

Another is by used of birth control pills, which affect the mucous Membranes of the virgins. Increasing or decreasing the discharge, they disrupt normal vaginal health by causing it to be become too alkaline.

This condition encourages the growth of bacteria and the fungus known as Candida albicans.

Allergies are another cause of abnormal discharge, especially food additives and Colonies and Synthetics food.
